

For Immediate Release

Park City Film Studios™ Construction Development Continues After Brief Cessation

PARK CITY, UT - October 14, 2014, Park City Film Studios and Sahara, L.L.C., today announced that they are moving forward with construction on the multi-million dollar film studio facility in Park City, Utah.

“The brief cessation of work allowed us to complete an agreement with financial partner/co-owner and seasoned developer, Gary Crandall, to advance completion of the project,” said Greg Ericksen, of Park City Film Studios.

Gary Crandall is the owner/developer of New Park Town Center Kimball Junction and is a resident of Park City, Utah.

General Contractor, Sahara, L.L.C., confirms that it was asked to advance the project forward and felt it prudent to get paving down “so we could continue to push on through the winter,” Clegg Mabey said.

“Upon completion of the paving we anticipate commencing construction at the prior pace barring any inclement weather,” added Mabey.

For more information, visit www.parkcityfilmstudios.com.

About Park City Film Studios

Park City Film Studios™ is a mixed-use development now under construction in Park City, Utah. The 374,000 square foot mixed-use facility will include soundstages, film production offices, commercial business offices, hotel, restaurants, retail and an array of studio services including the digital motion capture stage and technology. Studio representatives are already in discussions with film companies, television shows, game producers, and commercial productions in anticipation of the studios’ first phase facilities opening early 2015. Groundbreaking ceremonies were held at the project site on October 8, of 2013.

Media Contact:

Austin Isbell, Love Communications
Tel: + 801-519-8880
aisbell@lovecomm.net